—The Bulletin of Tibetology seeks to serve the specialist as well as the general reader with an interest in his field of study. The motif portraying the Stupa on the mountain suggests the dimensions of the field—

EDITORS

GYALMO HOPE NAMGYAL
T. SHERAB GYALTSHEN
NIRMAL C. SINHA
CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Article</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>BYANG-CHUB-LAM-GYI-RIM-PAHI-NAMS-LEN LOBSANG LHALUNGPA</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>THE REFUGE: INDIA, TIBET &amp; MONGOLIA NIRMAL C. SINHA</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOTES &amp; TOPICS MYNAK R. TULKU</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTRIBUTORS IN THIS ISSUE—

LOBSANG PHUNTSOK LHALLINGPA Tibetan scholar resident in New Delhi; formerly a monk official in Lhasa Secretariat and had traditional Tibetan schooling; first Tibetan to expound Buddhism in modern academic idiom; collaborated with academicians like George Roerich; author of well-known translations, Tibetan into English and English into Tibetan; organiser of several Tibetan educational and publications programmes.

NIRMAL CHANDRA SINHA Director: Namgyal Institute of Tibetology; formerly teacher of history, University of Calcutta and editor, National Archives of India.

MYNAK RIKHU TILKU Presiding incarnate of Rikhu, the leading Sakya monastery in Mynak (Kham); resident in Sikkim since 1949 and attached to the Namgyal Institute of Tibetology, first as a student of Sanskrit and English and now as a member of the staff.

Views expressed in the Bulletin of Tibetology are those of the contributors alone and not of the Namgyal Institute of Tibetology. An article represents the private individual views of the author and does not reflect those of any office or institution with which the author may be associated.
TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH

—LOBSANG LIALUNGPA
༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༡

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༢

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༣

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༤

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༥

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༦

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༧

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༨

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༩

༄༅། །དོན་གྲངས་དཔེ་གྲངས་སུ་ལོག་པ་དགོས། ༡༠
གྲོས་ཤིག་ལེགས་བཞི་བཞི་འོག་པ་ཤིང་
རྣམ་བཟང་བ་རྒྱན་མཆོག་ཤུ་ལྟར་བཟོ་འཕྲེང་
རྣ་པོ་ཤིང་ས་དྭེ་ཤེས་བྲོ་མ་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
ཚེ་མོ་ཆེན་པོ་རྣམ་པོ་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
གླེང་བོ་བེ་བྲང་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
བོད་ལྟར་བཟོ་མ་ཤིང་
 Nashville, Tennessee, USA | 01 October 2023

Daniel Smith | Business Analyst

To: Jane Doe | Manager

Subject: Sales Report for the Month of September

Dear Jane,

I am writing to provide you with the sales report for the month of September. The sales figures show an increase of 10% compared to last year. The top-selling products were XYZ and ABC, with a combined total of $50,000.

I have also included a detailed breakdown of sales by region and product category. Please find附件 attached.

Best regards,

Daniel Smith

---

Attachment: Sales Report September 2023.pdf
བསྟན་པ་དཔེ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད

1. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
2. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
3. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
4. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
5. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
6. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
7. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
8. རྟེ་འབྲིལ་བཟང་པོས་བོད་ཡི་མཛད
শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা

শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা

শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা

শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা

শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা

শেষ বয়ে বন্ধুরা
দুনিয়ার যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উদ্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।

দুনিয়ার মাঝে যে নিম্নলিখিত অংশগুলি আমার উ�্দেশ্যে খুলে রাখা যায়।
1. Thou whose body is born of goodness and a million perfections, Thou whose speech fulfils the hopes of countless beings, Thou whose Mind accurately perceives all that can be known; Lord of the Sakya, I do homage to Thee!
2. Best of the spiritual sons of the incomparable Master, Who bore the burden of the Buddha's universal mission, Whose incarnations are active in very many worlds, Maitreya and Manjushri, I salute You!
3. The teachings of the Prajna-Pranata being so abstruse to grasp, That their meanings have been truly expounded, By Nagarjuna and Asanga, those jewels of Zambala, the continent of the East, famed throughout the three planes of existence, at whose feet I bow!
4. Of the fine tradition handed down through these two vehicles, Dealing with the path of profound Theory and the path of widespread Action, You made an abridgement of its essence which was faultless, O Atisa, Keeper of the Treasury of the Teaching, I bow at your feet!
5. By using skilled methods arising out of loving conduct, brilliant Gurus gave to the fortunate ones the eye for seeing all the sacred Scriptures and the best way To achieve deliverance; to them I make obeisance!
6. For you who were the head ornament of the whole learned world, Nagarjuna and Asanga, the banner of your fame Is glorious to all humanity; from you is handed down The great tradition embodied in the Stages of the Path to Enlightenment, For it fulfils all the noble aspirations of humanity; It is the precious Wishing Gem of Teaching, And the meeting of a thousand streams of scriptures forming an Ocean of perfect exposition!

FOUR CHARACTERISTICS

7. Understanding of all the doctrines so perfectly in accord And understanding of the sacred Scriptures arises, The meaning of the Buddha's ideal is discovered, Which affords protection from the abyss of great degeneration
Therefore those many fortunate ones who were the learned ones of Tibet and India, who applied this sublime exposition, the three kinds of Seekers; and who is there who is not deeply influenced by it?

3. That which constitutes the essence of the whole Scriptures if anyone reads and hears about the nature of this even once it will bring a flood of merit acquired by the hearing and the preaching of the Dharma, hence contemplate on its meanings!

THE IMPORTANCE OF SPIRITUAL MASTER

9. Then you must realize that laying the foundation properly of the causal link of all the virtues in this life and the next is to follow a noble master in reverence and devotion, and to endure without giving up even at the cost of one’s own life.

Verify, please him by practicing his teachings as the best form of worship!

\( \text{the seer, have practiced thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!} \)

THE FUNDAMENTAL PATH COMMON TO "LESSOR SEEKERS"—BEGINNERS

16. This human body with the eight beneficial circumstances and opportunities is better than the Wishag Gem.

And as such it is found one as only.

It is hard to find and easy to destroy like a lightning flash.

When one has grasped the principle of all worldly action and understood that it is like flying chaff.

One should always, day and night, be intent on acquiring the essence of good action.

\( \text{I, the seer, have practiced thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!} \)

11. After death there is no assurance of not being in miserable circumstances.

The Triple Gem is a refuge from that fear.

And follow the precepts attentively and when you have thought carefully about Karma, good and bad.

It is your responsibility what you apply in your life or what you abstain!

\( \text{I, the seer, have practiced thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!} \)

13. Until one attains (again) a human body with consummate qualities,

No progress in spiritual path is possible,

Therefore study all its causes.
The three inlets, (body, speech, and mind,) are defiled with the mud of vice and immorality.
Equally important is it to cleanse oneself of bad Karma,
And to hold faithfully always to the Fourfold powers of virtues,
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance,
do the same!

THE PATH FOR "INTERMEDIATE SEEKERS"

13. If one does not try to think about the fruits of Karma
The sincere urge for deliverance will not arise.
If one does not think of the cause of the cycle of Samara
One does not know how to cut away its root.
So one must be aware of the bondage of this same Samara
And hold to a regretful renunciation of the world.
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance,
do the same!

THE PATH FOR "GREAT SEEKERS"

14. Determination (the taking of the Bodhisattva Vow) is the central support of the Mahayana Path.
It is the foundation of all the great flood of noble action. It produces the twin merits (by means of morality and knowledge) as an alchemist produces gold, like a treasury of well being from the accumulation of the highest merits.
Knowing this, the Bodhisattvas keep in the centre of their minds the Supreme Spiritual Aim.
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance,
do the same!

THE SIX PERFECTIONS

Generosity is the Wishing Gem that fulfils the hopes of men
It is an excellent weapon for cutting the knot of Miserliness.
It fashions the fearlessness and undaunted courage of the Bodhisattvas.
It makes their good name spread in all directions;
Understanding this the wise sacrifice their merit, property and bodies for the benefit of others!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance,
do the same!

Morality is the water for the cleansing of the defilement of bad conduct.
It is the light of the moon which cools the burning ferment of bad thoughts.
It stands with the dignity of Mount Meru in the midst of mankind.
To those who keep its all own turn, without the threat of force being used.
Since holy men understand this, they hold to their normal vows and counsel them as they would their sight!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

17.
(3) The Perfection of Patience.
Patience is the best ornament for those who have power of endurance.
It is the finest form of self-mortification (tapas) in the face of tormenting misery.
Like Garuda (the eagle), it destroys the vipers of anger.
It is a strong armour against abuse.
Understanding this, seeker of truth arrive to practice patience in every possible way.
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

18.
(4) The Perfection of Strenuousness
If one puts on the resolute and unchanging armour of energy
Then understanding of the Buddha's teachings and awakening will grow like a waxing moon.
It will give meaning to all activity.
And whatever one undertakes will have a successful conclusion.
Understanding this Bodhisattvas emit a great wave of energy eliminating every form of inactivity!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

19.
(5) The Perfection of Meditative Concentration:
Saxton, the Perfection of Concentration, is like a king reigning over the mind.
If aimed on a fixed point it is static like Mount Meru.
If projected, it will permeate all thoughts and will effect great bliss to body and mind.
Understanding this those who seek the truth shun idle thoughts as an enemy and persevere in meditation constantly.
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

20.
(6) The Perfection of Wisdom.
By the eye of infinitive Wisdom one understands the profundity of the absolute reality.
It is the way to cut at the root of Samsara (the cycle of existence).
It is the Treasure praised in all the Scriptures, famous as the brilliant light shining in the black night of our ignorance.
(Understanding this the wise, who seek deliverance, set about striving hard along this path.

1. The seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

21. By one pointed concentration alone, we cannot cut the root of Sensate, the suffering of the world. On the other hand, without attaining the meditative absorptions, wisdom alone cannot eradicate craving, hatred and ignorance (the Three Poisons)

The highest wisdom that understands all should sit on the horse of motionless absorption.
And with the sharp blade of the unlimited logic of the Middle Way cut away all extreme views and delusions of mind.
By means of examining actually with vast knowledge
Progress is made in attaining the highest realization!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

22. There is no need to emphasise that samadhi is attained only by deep concentration.
It is attainable even by means of right analysis examining the true nature of reality.
Those who understand this and strive for the joint application of the twin principle of the meditative absorption and insight are to be admired!

I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

23. Samadhi perceives Svacitta as it were the Heavens.
Perception after samadhi is empty like a magical scene.
Meditating upon these two, those who achieve the perfection of Bodhisattva activities by the skilful means and insight are to be praised.
It is the tradition of the fortunate seekers never to be content with partial practice!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

THE PATH OF VAJRAYANA

24. Thus, while practising properly the common practice necessary for both the excellent path of the Mahayana and the Vajrayana, one must rely upon and follow wise masters who bestow initiations into ocean of sacred tantric teachings.
Then one should apply in one’s life all the instructions, thereby achieve the purpose of this fortunate human life!
I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

20
For the purpose of remembering and making it clear in my own mind and in order to help other fortunate people, I have described in simple clear language the all inclusive Path which is pleasing to the Buddha. I would that by this merit, the sublime Path may never be lost to all beings!

I, the seer, have practised thus: May you, who seek deliverance, do the same!

This abridged treatise on the Graded Path to Enlightenment has been composed for the purpose of remembering the Teaching by Lobzang Drakpa at the Gaden Monastery.
RGYAN-DRIUG MCHOG-GNYIS (Six Ornaments and Two Excellents) reproduces ancient scrolls (1670 A.C.) depicting Buddha, Nagarjuna, Aravinda, Asanga, Vasubandhu, Dignaga, Dharmakirti, Gunaprabha, and Sakysprabha; reproductions are as per originals today after 100 years of display and worship with no attempt at restoration or retouching. The exposition in English presents the iconographical niceties and the theme of the paintings, namely, the Mahayana philosophy; the treatment is designed to meet also the needs of the general reader with an interest in Trans-Himalayan art or Mahayana. A glossary in Sanskrit-Tibetan, a key to place names and a note on source material are appended. Illustrated with five colour plates and thirteen monochromes.

April 1962.
I take refuge in the Buddha
I take refuge in the Dharma
I take refuge in the Sangha

The Trinity constitutes the Buddha Dharma (1). One who takes refuge in the Three Jewels is a Buddha: one who does not is not a Buddha.

Authentic autographic evidence of Asoka being a Buddhist—in denominational sense—is borne by the single reference to the Three Jewels in Bairat Edict (Asiatic Society, Calcutta) and not from the multiple epigraphs recording Asoka’s exhortation for observance of the Dharma. Asoka affirms thus to the Sangha “You know, Sirs, how deep is my veneration for and faith in the Buddha, the Dharma and the Sangha” (2).

All dates are in Christian era.

Discretionary marks are not used. Passages in Sanskrit and Tibetan appended in the Notes are in respective scripts. Between Prakrit/Ful and Sanskrit preference is made for Sanskrit for the simple reason that the Dharma reached the Trans-Himalayas in Sanskrit medium.

For Mongol data I have depended entirely on translation by competent scholars and have not therefore transcribed the Mongol passages.

This paper and the two succeeding ones may be described as Prolegomena to Lamaist Polity. These three papers enquire into the theory of political obligation and the title to reign in a Lamaist State. These papers are thus studies in history and politics and not in religion and philosophy.

I have consulted several Lamas and Theras for fuller understanding of the religion. These Lamas and Theras are however in no way responsible for my findings as a student of history. Lamas, Theras and other scholars consulted will be duly acknowledged in the completed work on Lamaist Polity.
Before its final victory in Tibet towards the end of the 8th century Buddhism had several encounters with Bon. Verbal evidence of Buddhism as state religion in Tibet can be traced from about 810 for the good reason that the Three Jewels were invoked as witnesses in the famous treaty (821/822) between Tibet and China. The Sanskrit-Tibetan lexicon Mahavyutpatti, a work of the 5th century, shows full familiarity with the concepts of Three Jewels and Refuge.

Centuries before the Yellow (Gelug) sect, the older Sects (Karma and Sakya) are known to have preached among the Mongols, Kalmas and Buruts. That this early propagation was not superficial can be established from names and titles drawn upon Buddhist vocabulary; several names translated Three Jewels and Protection under jewels (4). Contemporary epigraphic evidence speaks of the images of Three Jewels and invokes the blessings of Three Jewels (4). Sanskrit form Ratna itself became popular as Erdeni (Erdeni)—'r' sound without a vowel prefix being impossible in Mongol speech.

The concept of refuge (Skt. Sarana)—Isvara/Purusha as refuge—was already in Indian thought before Gautama Buddha. The element of submission or surrender sublimated into faith (Skt. Shraddha) or devotion (Skt. Bhakti) found later its historic exposition in the Bhagavadgita (composed "not more than a few centuries before our era" acc. Edgerton; 4th century B.C. acc. RadhaKrishnan). In chapter IX: verse 18 Krishna (God's incarnation on earth) describes himself as the abode and the refuge. In the concluding chapter (XVII, v. 66) Krishna enjoins Arjuna thus: "Fly to Me alone! Make Me thy single refuge!" (Edwin Arnold's trans. in verse). The origins of the Bhakti cult are traced back to centuries before the Buddha (6).

It will be wrong to say that the Buddhist concept of refuge was identical with the Brahmanical. The Brahmanical notion of Isvara/Purusha was rejected by Buddhism. The Buddhist doctrine of Karma did not admit the merits of Varana (causa) and the Buddhist formula of Prajnaparamitapa (Interdependent Causation) was more omnipotent than Isvara/Purusha. There was thus no question of refuge in an abode of grace for a Buddhist.

An exposition of the philosophy of Buddhist refuge to be in any way satisfactory will need considerable space and cannot be conveniently accommodated in this paper (7). It is however necessary and relevant to emphasize here that without a feeling of submission or surrender one cannot seek refuge. A determined quest for refuge will no doubt demand a determined faith in the quest.
There is a controversy that the Buddha’s own teachings being based on reason and being not focused on my supernatural agency or divine instrument, the Sādha (Pali: Suddha) of Buddhist vocabulary may not be called reverential faith and much less absolute faith. The context of Buddhist fundamentals will no doubt rule out faith divorced from reason and the Theravāda profession, as Jayatilleke’s brilliant arguments suggest, perhaps upholds this idea(8). Yet it is a fair question that how many in the Sangha—besides a few scholarly monks and priests—can strive for salvation with reason as the only ritual. The arrogance of reason can kill the humility of the seeker but not kindle his spirit. In reality a seeker exercises his head to choose a way and once on the way he exercises his heart. As Nalinakha Deva said in 1930 “Let it Hinayana or Mahayana, Suddha is at the basis of all practices”(9). The present writer would underline the word “practices” as practices more than theories provide data for his investigations.

The practice of seeking refuge, for example, has been inspired for 2500 years more by reverential faith than by cold reason. Tagore had pointed out at the beginning of this century—Buddhist has a hard core of metaphysics in it but its universality was due to its humanism; Karuna, Maitri and Hridayaprasara and not because of the excellence of its metaphysics(10). Refuge is sought in promising quarters. The Three Jewels hold the promise of Love and Friendliness and naturally spoke in the seeker Reverence and Faith. No catus intellectually was involved when in the historic past nearly half of Asia went for refuge (SkT. Sāna-nana/Tib. Skyab-kyru). Hundreds in the West today seek this refuge with Suddha because of their emotional response to the promise of Love and Friendliness; most of these Westerners have yet to read the Abhidharma.

III

The sequence of the Three Jewels follows the chronological sequence of the emergence of the Three. While Enlightenment (SkT. Bothil Tib. Byang-chub) witnessed as almost simultaneous originiation of the Buddha and the Dharma, the Sangha was certainly a later phenomenon in terms of history. Many believers would however consider that the Three jewels were from the first inseparable. As Christmas Humphreys puts it “the organization of the Sangha is the Buddha’s lifetime was not the mere child of necessity. The Triad was clearly conceived as a unit, for the Buddha said in terms that after his passing the Dharma was to be the disciple’s ‘Teacher, and the Sangha was founded as a missionary enterprise within a few weeks of the Enlightenment” (11).

While history does not subscribe to the doctrine of an interdependent simultaneous originiation of the Three, history records that the Sangha was as powerful as the Dharma at the time of Nirvana. "It is chiefly to this institution (i.e. Sangha) that the permanence of his (i.e. Buddha's) religion is due" (11). "The continuity of the monastic organisation has been the only constant factor in Buddhist history" (13).

The Dharmapada, a faithful embodiment of the Buddha's teaching and perhaps containing many of the Buddha's own words, has these five verses on refuge (14):

"Men driven by fear go to many a refuge, to mountains, and to forests, to sacred trees, and shrines.

"That, verily, is not a safe refuge; that is not the best refuge. After having got to that refuge a man is not delivered from all pains.

"But he who takes refuge in the Buddha, the Law, and the Order, he perceives, in his clear wisdom, the four noble truths.

"Suffering, the origin of suffering, the cessation of suffering, and the noble eightfold path which leads to the cessation of suffering.

"That, verily, is a safe refuge; that is the best refuge; after having got to that refuge a man is delivered from all pains. (tr. Radhakrishnan)

The objective is freedom from all fears and all pains; the cessation of all suffering in the present and in the future. The prescribed refuge became a categorical imperative for deliverance from all evils. Like the belief in Karma or the acceptance of the Pratityasamutpada, the refuge in the Triratna was a matter of faith. In congregational worship a spirit of conformity is generated. This spirit endows the categorical imperative with faith for one and all: faith of the individual is but a reflex of the faith of the community and vice versa. While the Buddha (after Nirvana) and the Dharma were transcendental and intangible objects, the Sangha was immanent and tangible and the refuge in the Sangha evoked faith par excellence. The Sangha under favourable circumstances could be the "single refuge" in matters spiritual as well as temporal. The Sangha had a mission "for the profit of the many, for the bliss of the many, out of compassion for the world, for the welfare, the profit, the bliss of deus and mankind".

IV

The designation SANGHA was truly prophetic. It recalled a past and promised a future. Panini (c.600 B.C., that is, sometime before the Buddha) considered Sangha as synonymous with Gana (an old Vedic term meaning a group, a company or a corporate body with a definite object. By the Buddha’s time Sangha was an omnibus word which could mean a craft-guild, a body of (tribal) mercenaries, a group of mendicants or recluses, or even a tribal state (elitarchic/repulbicn).

The Buddha framed for his sangha elaborate organizational rules which made it a historic force in India and Asia. These rules (Vinyaśa: Prātimoksha) avoided the orthodox hereditary (Varnarāja) and drew upon the practices of the Sākya, Vajjī and the Malla (1). Suffering humanity released from the disabilities and discriminations based on birth could have no better refuge than the Sāṅgha which battled against JÅTI-VARNA and JÅRA-MÅRNA.

Centuries later, Asanga expounded that the sangha being the highest of all Ganas was the appropriate refuge. The Sangha was no longer a category needing Pasini’s schism; unless repugnant to the context the term Sangha would mean the Gana founded by the Buddha. A millennia num stood between Pasini and Asanga. The millennium witnessed the rise and fall of dynasties and empires, foreign invasions and advent of new races, rebellions against old sacrifices and old gods, and rise of new schools of metaphysics and epistemology; is the second half of this millennium the Dharma moved in two separate Vehicles but the Sangha in either Vehicle accommodated members of the other and professed the name Vinyaśa (16). The monastic organization, to quote Conez again, has been the only constant factor in Buddhist history (17).

Asoka was fully aware of the role of the sangha and therefore strove much to prevent split or schism. The schism eventually occurred. But the Sangha was a most active force for another thousand years, and ous of its native land made history from the sunny islands in the Indian Ocean to the freezing steppes in Siberia. While Asoka’s name was almost forgotten in his own country, the chronicles of Ceylon and Burma or of Tibet and Mongolia ranked Asoka higher than their national heroes. Much is said about Asoka having contributed to the spread of the Dharma. It is however not clear whether Asoka could have succeeded without an instrument as the Third Jewel.

Asoka himself had no doubt that the sangha was greater than Deva-sampradāya Priyadāniraja Asoka. The epithet “Beloved of the Gods” is thought by many as an approximation to Divine Right, a concept not yet grown in Indic polity. Asoka’s description of his subjects “All men are my children” (Klingsggs Rock Edict) is interpreted as a mark of paternal despotism. In the famous Barat Edict, meant for the Sangha, Asoka describes himself simply as Raja Priyadarshi of Magadh, salutes the Sangha and addresses the members of the Sangha with the honorific Bimana/Bimada (18). The Bairaus Edict was not a proclamation to the Church from its Imperial Protector. it was an advice from one who had taken refuge in the Church.
Asoka fixed the precedence and protocol. Even today in any orthodox Buddhist community from the sunny south, to the freezing north the highest laity takes precedence after the junior most monks. Refuge in the Sangha requires submission without reservation.

V

The concept of refuge was deeper and wider in Mahayana than in the other school. The lesson of Prapayasamitva was that even if the Nirvana was unreal in the sense that it was incomprehensible, endeavour for liberation from suffering was compulsive or inevitable; aware of the unreality of all phenomena a believer was to strive for the enlightenment of all beings. Liberation must be universal or total. Even if a tiny brute was left unredeemed the Nirvana of the rest would be spoiled with the suffering of that tiny one. One who realised this truth and worked for all was the Bodhisattva (19). The promise of universal salvation evoked a deeper response in Mahayana.

Sraddha in Mahayana was not unlike that in the contemporary Brahmanical movement called Bhagavata or Bhakti. Even the term Bhakti as understood in Brahmanism would be appropriate to describe devotionalism in Mahayana. It is not within the scope of the present enquiry to notice which religion or which school originated Bhakti (20). It is however material to note that the Buddha cult, that is, the doctrine of past, present and future Buddhas and the cult of faith in saviours were the dominant and interlaced features of Indian milieu during the Kushana times, the times which witnessed the spread of Buddhism all over Central Asia. The refuge in Triratna did no longer proceed out of intellectual comprehension (Pali. Paramajjati, Pāla. Pratisthā). The refuge trod the path of love and devotion to the Buddha who had discarded his material riches to save the suffering lives and to those who renounced their rights to Nirvana to lead the rest to the same goal. Radhakrishnan considers the Anusmrti (constant remembrance or awareness) of Mahayana to be the same as the Bhakti of Bhagavata or the Isvarapraptidhāna of Yoga-sutra (21).

Sastideva, the scholar-aest of 8th century, expressed the depths and forms of the devotional Buddhism. His two works Śikṣāsamuccaya and Bodhicharyavatara are fortunately available in both original (Sanskrit) and translation (Tibetan). A chapter in Śikṣāsamuccaya is devoted to Remembrance of Three Jewels. Here the author discusses individually the Buddha, the Dharma and the Sangha as objects of remembrance but concludes, with more than half the space of the whole chapter, with the virtues of the Bodhisattvas (22). In Bodhicharyavatara the devotee bow not only to the Buddha (past-present-future), the Dharma and the Gāṇatāmas (the best of Ganas i.e. Sangha) but also to the Bodhisattva-resorts and Chaityas and the Upalbhayus (preceptors) and Yatis (ascetics). Then the devotee takes refuge in the Buddha, the Dharma and the Bodhisattvaguna (the Gosa of the Bodhisattvas i.e. Sangha) (13). The accent on Bodhisattvas is obvious and significant. The best of Gosa is the Gosa of Bodhisattvas. The Bodhisattvaguna was the dearest Jewel; nearer and more tangible than the other two; dearer than the other two because it was the assembly of saviours.

The refuge was now not a purely doctrinal matter. The imagery of the believers demanded and created iconic forms for the Three Jewels, Three points, three prongs or a triangle (Skt. Trikonas; Bh. Zur-gum) could not satisfy the aesthetic yearnings of the believers (14) and finally a set of three anthropomorphic forms emerged. The Buddha was depicted as Sakyamuni in earth touching posture, the Dharma as goddess Prajnaparamita with four hands and the Sangha as Avalokitesvara with four heads (15). As Prajnaparamita expressed the quintessence of the Dharma, Avalokitesvara expressed the compassion of the Sangha (16). Elaborate rituals for the adoration of the Three Jewels were as ancient as the Mahayana. Bodhisattvabhumi of Asanga has a chapter on Full-servetparamana of which the first and foremost section is Ratnapuja (17). Ratnapuja and/or Sarangamana in one form or other continued and found conspicuous expression in Vajrayana. The Sthūlas of medieval Tantric abound with references to the Triple Refuge (18). Vajranaradha-ya of Ratnakarasmita (Atisa’s teacher) has the refuge formula (19) in which the Buddha is described as the Highest of Men (following Asanga’s dictum), the Dharma as Mahayana (stating the dominance of Mahayana visavis Hinayan in India) and the Sangha as Avalokiteshvaratvaguna (claiming the Sangha as an organization of infallible adepts). The words within brackets are our comments; as ‘infallible’ represents the spirit of the word ‘avaiyavakta it is not necessary to probe into the etymology or history of this word here (19).

By the thirteenth century Buddhism came to an end in the plains of India. The founder, Gautama Buddha, was absorbed into Brahmanical theo-n. The doctrine, Dharma, was remembered as a futile rebellion though considerable parts of its philosophy were conveniently added to the corpus of Brahmanical learning and its adoration (Dharmapuja) was combined with a pre-Vedic ritual. The Saṅgha, the true arm of the Dharma and the real enemy of traditionalism, died for ever in the plains of India (17).
The Tsevatn migrated to the Trans-Himalayas and found refuge up to the Siberian steppes. The Sangha played the leading role in this migration.

The Sarvagamana (Tib. Skyabs-brgyos) as recorded in Niyaka, Avadana, Vinaya and Mahayana Sutras or as expounded by Asanga and Atisa was duly translated for incorporation into Tibetan canon; these need no citation here. In Tibetan understanding, however, the Sangha appeared as the leading jewel. This was natural as the Sangha was the instrument of propagation of the Dharma as of confrontation with the indigenous religion. Till the arrival of Santarakshita (popular as Khempo Bodhi-sattva in Tibet) and Padmasambhava (popular as Guru Rimpoche in Tibet) the Sangha was composed of Indian monks and priests; as history bears out they were men of character, learning and determination and individually made deep impression thus contributing to the stock of the Sangha. The Bodhisattva doctrine of collectivist striving for salvation struck a responsive chord in Tibetan mind (13) and the Sangha as Bodhisattva Guna stimulated loyalty even when it was a body of foreigners only. Besides the medium of preceptor being indispensable in the esoteric Vajra cult, the Sangha developed as the dominant Jewel. This fact finds reflection in Tibetan expositions on refuge.

For representative Tibetan expositions one, whether a student of religion or a student of history, has to look into compositions made between c. 1050 and 1150. This period began with the emergence of Buddhism as the national religion and witnessed the rise of several monasteries whose corridors became corridors of power (33).

Atisa came to Tibet in 1042 and preached for twelve years till his death. His disciples Hkomston and others recorded his sermons as the Word of the Spiritual Father (Bkah-gdams-pha-chhos) and supplemented with their own comments entitled the Word of the Spiritual Son (Bkah-gdams-bu-chhos). The Word of the Father has many passages extolling the imperative need of refuge in the Three Jewels. The conspicuity of the Lama (Guru) in these passages holds the attention of a student of history. "The Guru is the Buddha, the Guru is the Dharma and the Guru is the Sangha". Therefore, "I take refuge in the Guru: I take refuge in the Buddha: I take refuge in the Dharma: I take refuge in the Sangha" (14). The Word of the Son continues this, describes the Guru as the excellent refuge and hails the Sangha as the leader (hrempa Skt. naNaka) (33).

Another exposition of the Triple Refuge is in Sgamopa (1079-1143)'s Jewel Ornament of Liberation. Rooted deeply in Indian tradition and drawing profusely on Indian sources, this treatise is an exposition—for laity as well as clergy—of the real meaning, that is, the spiritual meaning of refuge. Yet words and comments about the ordinary mind’s reaction are significant. “Ordinary persons frightened by the misery of Samsara hold the Three Jewels to be gods.” “Ordinary mind takes refuge because it cannot bear its individual misery.” Though “the Buddha is the ultimate refuge the ordinary mind takes refuge in Bodhisattvas (Sangha) as the most excellent refuge” (38).

It is thus not surprising that in the next century the presiding abbot of a powerful monastery would be addressed as Skyab-rgyon (Lord of Refuge). Tradition in Sakyas as well as Kagyé (Karsha) sects traces such usage back to the thirteenth century. Later the Gélugpa found this a convenient usage and sanctified it officially (17).

VII

The Gélugpa propagation in Mongolia (1200-1700) not only disseminated the merits of refuge in the Trikaya but also the indispensability of the Lama. Following passages from Erdeni-yin-Tokei, composed in 1662, echo the response of the Mongol nobility (38).

As for these three sublime and rare jewels, combined thus into one (in the person of) one’s benevolent Lama (chaplain),

Although one seek a refuge other than that one, on account of its being very difficult to find, (it is apparent that)

This refuge, one’s benevolent Lama’s clearly-perceiving thought (is) the many buddhas; the commandments be voiced exclusively (are) Sublime Doctrines; obviously, the material body (is) the Holy Clergy. Until one find true bodhisattvacharita by this, one should rely completely on this meritorious teacher.

(tan. Krüger)

This veneration for the Lama as also for the Holy Clergy was not an altogether Gélugpa achievement and perhaps went back to the thirteenth century when the Sakyas were chaplains of the Imperial Mongol (Yuan) Dynasty. The Mongol chronicles of the sixteenth century played down the Sakyas and Karsha propagation of the earlier times. Even then evidence is forthcoming. A period which produced the Mongol versions of Panchaviksha, Swarnaprabhana or Lalitavistara (52) could not be ignorant of the merits of Triratna. Unimpeachable epigraphic data not only speak of the veneration for the Three Jewels but also of the use of their images (46). Among the popular names of pre-Gelugpa times were: Protected by the Buddha, Slave of the Three Jewels and Slave of the Sangha (47).

VIII

The refuge formula universally accepted, from the Himalayas to the Altai, and from the Kokonor to the Baikal, was

I take refuge in the Lama (Guru)
I take refuge in the Sangye (Buddha)
I take refuge in the Chhios (Dharma)
I take refuge in the Gedun (Sangha)
NOTES

2. For the original text see Note 18 infra.

3. The document as read by Hugh Richardson is reproduced in Ancient Historical Edicts at Lhasu (Royal Asiatic Society London 1917), pp. 66-69.

The Samye pillar-inscription, which Giuseppe Tucci accepts as that of Khi-rasang-dje-bean himself, speaks of...

5. Nicholas Poppe: The Mongolische Monumente in Bhagavat Script (Wienbaden 1939); vide the two metal plates illustrated, transcribed and translated on pp. 60-64.
6. Bhagavadgita, ch IX, v.18

and ch XVIII, v.66

Origins and history of the Bhakti cult have several theories and controversies. Vide B.G. Bhandarkar: "Vaisnavism Saurin and Other Minor Religious Systems" (Strassburg 1913; later reprints Poona etc.); H.C. Roychoudhuri: Materials for the Study of the Early History of the Vaisnavaca Sad (Calcutta 1916); S.N. Das Gupta: A History of Indian Philosophy, Vol II (Cambridge 1933/1939); and Bhagvati Satri: The Bhakti Cult in Ancient India (Calcutta 1945/Varanasi 1965). Har Dayal's theory, in The Bodhisattva Doctrine in Buddhist Sanskrit Literature (London 1932), that Bhakti first originated in Buddhism and that Bhakti was an integral part of Buddhist ideal from the earliest times (p.32) does not convince historians and offend the Theravada scholars.

7. No attempt is made in this paper to present the doctrinal meaning since the theme of this paper is quite mundane, namely, how the popular mind reacted to the doctrine and its impact in Samsara (mundane milieu). A short but authentic Mahayana exposition in English (six super octavo pages) is that of Marco Pallis: Peaks and Landas (London 1939/1946), ch XVII; a mystic and a scholar Marco Pallis presents the cream from Gampopa and Tsongkhapa. Gampopa's treatise is now available in English translation with ample notes in Herbert Guenther: The Jewel Ornament of Liberation (London 1959).

8. K.N. Jayatilleke: Early Buddhist Theory of Knowledge (London 1963), pp.183-400. From a purely textual point of view Jayatilleke is perfect. But perfection detached from reality has no bearing on present enquiry. It is not denied that "there has existed throughout Buddhist history a tension between the Bhaktic and the Gnostic approach to religion". Edward Conze: Buddhism Its Essence and Development (Oxford 1951/1953 etc., p.40. As Conze says "There are a few modern writers who make Buddhism quite rational by eliminating all metaphysics, reincarnation, all the gods and spirits, all miracles and supernatural powers. Theirs is not the Buddhism of the Buddhists". Buddhist Thought in the India (London 1962), p.19, n.n.
9. Nalbukha Dutt: Aspects of Mahayana and its Relation to Hinduism (London 1930), p.103; further developed in Indian Historical Quarterly (Calcutta), Vols 16 & 17. Dutt has perhaps overdone the word 'Svadharma' in conjunction with Prasada, but his theory has support in Anta's use of the term Prasada for 'faith' (Bairot Edict). See Note 12 infra.

10. Vide the present writer's article "Rahindranath Tagore on Buddhism" contributed to the Tagore Centenary Number of The Mahadai (Calcutta) or France-Inde Asia (Tokyo). It is needless to labour the point that Brahmanism, Confucianism or Zoroastrianism failed in Inner Asia not because of lack of metacultural content.

13. Conze: Buddhism, p.54

14. Dhammapada: Buddhavagga 10-14

15. For Sangha and Cama vide K.P. Jayaswal: Hindu Polity (Calcutta 1914-Bangalore 1943); D.R. Bhardwaj: Carmichael Lectures (Calcutta 1918-19) and Some Aspects of Ascetic Hindu Polity (Benares 1925/1963); R.C. Majumdar: Corporate Life in Ancient India (Calcutta 1927); and Gokulder De: Dharmay in Early Buddhist Sangha (Calcutta 1956). On the question whether the Buddha derived the name as well as the organization from the political Sangha, see a balanced and erudite review in U.N. Ghoshal: Studies in Indian History and Culture (Calcutta 1965), pp.260-65. Marco Palli, who finds it difficult to translate Sangha into any European idiom, has this comment: "The Indian word originally used, Sangha, means "assembly" which is also the primitive meaning of the Greek ekkleıs." Peaks and Lamas, p. 18; 60.

16. Nalinaksha Dutt: Aspects of Mahayana etc, p. vi (La Vallee Poussin) and chapter 5.

The present writer attended the Sixth World Fellowship of Buddhist Conference (Phnom Penh, November 1961) and must quote in this context what Prince Norodom Sihamouk (Head of the State of Cambodia) said in inaugurating this session: "Whether Buddhists of the Southern School or Buddhist of the Northern School, we all live in accordance with the same doctrine; the unity of thought and the search for truth by different but not divergent paths gives us a moral strength of which the world has few examples to offer."

It is relevant to quote the words with which the Crown Prince of Sikkim (now the Chogyal) reciprocated:

"The writings of Nagarjuna, Vasubandhu and other masters of Mahayana philosophy abound with references to this basic unity of the two Vehicles. The Tibetan canon bears evidence of the essential unity of the different Buddhist schools and sects.

"The anxiety for reconciliation between the schools is as ancient as the shiん, The kushas and Pundartaka are instances of this spirit.

"The Chinese pilgrims visiting India long ago noticed that the members of the two Vehicles resided together in a number of establishments. The monks of the two Vehicles lived in harmony, performing in unison ecclesiastical acts and complying with the same rules of discipline. Some European critics and their Asian disciples, oblivious of the great tradition of Tolerance and Love in the Sangha, attributed the findings of the three pilgrims to confusion. There was no confusion certainly in the minds of the master scholars and sages reported by the pilgrims. Such tolerance or coexistence was reported also among Central Asian Buddhists. In the highest step towards Buddhism there could be no conflict."

Vide France-Indo-Asia (Tokyo), No. 171 (Jan-Feb. 1961) for these two speeches.

17. Vide Note 13 supra.

18. The relevant words are: विद्वानान् नाना मार्गम च संसारं अविचारेऽवन महतः भविष्यं न संकुल्ले-विलुप्तं भव। विद्वान् ६ मानं भय्यं हलं युक्तं पंचवे मथविलं विरितं वि संसारं च मभागं भव॥

26
Sanskrit rendering by Arunala Sen: भगवान् राजा महाशय: संयुक्त अनिष्काम
शाह। अनाथानि न रघुन् (—मुथु)—किसान न। किश्य तस्म: भक्ति:
मानकं सत्य गुदजः भवसे सत्य: इति गीते: अन्य:।

The word bhanta (Bhadanta) is generally rendered as Sir; D. R. Bhandarkar (Aoka, Calcutta 1955, p. 135) renders as Reverend Sir; Reverend One will also be good.

The word Pasada (Prasada) here certainly means faith. B.M. Barua points out यथिभसानि संयुक्ति गामाते च गाराले च, recalling गुदजः रघुजः सत्यः सत्यः अनिष्कामो of Anugat. Nikayas. Aoka and his Inscriptions (Calcutta 1955), Pt II, p. 64. Prasada in Sanskrit can also mean faith. Vide Edgerton: BIS Dictionary.

19. Rgya-gron-Mchog-Ngyis (Gangtok 1962) gives a brief account (in English) of Prajnaparamita and connected issues. For Woldisattva-vada, the kingpin of the Mahayana, Har Dayal’s book (cited above under Note 6) remains the standard authority.

20. Vide Note 6 supra.

24. Early ornamental motifs of Teiratna are seen in sanchi, Borhat and Amaravati. Standard works like Coomaraswamy: History of Indian and Indonesian Art (London 1927/New York 1965) or Zimmer: Art of Indian Asia (New York 1955) depict some of these.

25. Benoytosh Bhattacharyya: Indian Buddhist Iconography (Calcutta 1958), p. 40 illustrate a set from Nepal. For somewhat different forms

29. एकोज्ज्वालोक्षेपं धरणं गणनुमिति दिष्कमानसमपम, ध्वस्तं हरणं गणन्तयुति सत्त्वं महात्मनं, सत्त्वं हरणं गणन्तयुति अवैविचारस्वस्वार्थानं **

31. An account of the lasting contributions of the Sangha will be noted in S. Dutt: Buddhist Monks and Memorials in India (London 1963).

32. The facts of Tibetan ecology, that is, the socio-economic factors which favoured a collectivist striving will be presented by this writer elsewhere.

33. To be discussed in the succeeding papers in this journal.

34. Bhak-gdzis pha-chhus (xylograph in Namgyl Institute of Tibetology) _ग्स्त्तग्स/ग्स्त्तग्स_ (vol. II) _ग्स्त्तग्स/ग्स्त्तग्स_ (vol. V)

35. Bhak-gdzis bu-chhus (xylograph in NIT) _ग्स्त्तग्स/ग्स्त्तग्स_ (vol. V) _ग्स्त्तग्स/ग्स्त्तग्स_ (vol. V)
36. Vide Ch 8 in Guenther's English translation (cited under Note 3 supra).

37. To be discussed in the succeeding papers in this journal.

PRAJNA or the famous Sanskrit-Tibetan Thesaurus-cum-Grammar was compiled by Tenzing Gyaltsen, a Khampa scholar educated in Nyingma and Sakya schools of Derge, in 1771 A.C. Though this book was preserved in xylograph few copies of the block-prints are found outside Tibet. The lexicon portions are now presented in modern format with Tibetan words in Tibetan script and Sanskrit words in Sanskrit script with an elaborate foreword by Professor Nalinaksha Dutt.

October 1961.

The entire xylograph (637 pp: 21 inches x 4 inches) containing both lexicon and grammar parts is now presented by offset (photo-mechanic); most clear reproduction of any Tibetan xylograph ever made anywhere. A table of typographical errors etc., found in the original (xylograph), compiled by late lamented Gesgan Palden Gyaltsen (Mentsikhang: Lhasa and Enchay: Gangtok) makes the present publication an improvement upon the original.

November 1962.
Notes & Topics

SABDA & RUPA

Every religion has an element of symbolism. Dharma, Mahayana or Chihno is not an exception. Word or sound and mark or portrayal are characteristic expressions.

We often receive enquiries about hymns and prayers and symbols and images. Material in answer to such queries will be presented in the pages of this Bulletin.

Tsang-kha-pa's Song of Spiritual Experience, original text with Ushangpa's English rendering, is the first item in this issue. A note on the Eight Auspicious Objects is the concluding item.

NCS

EIGHT AUSPICIOUS OBJECTS

Tashi (Skt. Mangala or Subba) is explained in Maha Mangala Sutra/अमर्त्तंतरतःस्वरूपः (1) and also in Mengalagurav/मंगलगुरुव (2). Both the books define the word Tashi in four and other ways. Nagarjuna/नागार्जुन (महामंगल) explained this further and said that one can gain salvation by these ways (3).

It is also said that one who knows the Dharma/धर्म (4) and practises it, gains the luck for this world and as well as in the other world. In this connection Jampal Shenien/झांम्पाल र्नोन (5) explains thus: to understand the Dharma is accumulation of learning/अभिन्नमात्रत्वं (कहिं), and the good fortune is accumulation of moral merits/सुभक्षच धर्मसंसारमा (6).
Because the Buddha had blessed (4) the eight objects in order to bestow good fortune or happiness on the living beings these objects came to be known as Eight Auspicious Objects. In Tibetan tradition these objects are displayed after a consecration or installation ceremony to bestow good fortune or happiness on all living beings. The eight objects can be explained in two ways: legendary and symbolic.

LEGENDARY

One can find in the pages of Lalitavistara (སླིལ་ཏྭ་བི་སྡེ་གཟིན་) that some of these objects were offered to Gautama the Buddha on different occasions. There is controversy about the gods and people offering these objects. The scholars of Sakyay and Geling were almost agreed on the following offerings(5).

1. Mirror (སྟིང་པོ་) — The light holding goddess (སོགས་སྐྱེས་ཀྱི་བོད་) offered the mirror to the Buddha and He rendered it holy.

2. Intestinal concretion (བིས་ཐུབ) — Found in the entrails of certain animals and in the neck of an elephant—The land guarding elephant (བིས་ཐུབ་ཐོབ་ཟོམ་) offered it to the Buddha and He blessed it as a holy medicine.

3. Curd (ཐབ་) — Daughter of farmer (ལོག་པོ་) offered it to the Buddha and He blessed it as a food free from impurity (tin).

4. Durwa grass (དུར་བ་) — The Buddha was offered this holy grass by the grass seller, Mangalan (མང་ལ་) This was blessed by the Buddha as symbolic of long life. It is also said that Gautama attained Enlightenment sitting on this grass, under the Bodhi tree.

5. Fruit (ོག་) — Wood apple—Brahma (ོག་) offered it to the Buddha and He blessed it to be the best fruit.
6. White conch shell (.food) — Indra (Buddha) offered it to the Buddha after his enlightenment, when he begged him to turn the Wheel of Law (sutra). The Buddha blessed it and blew it before he preached the First Sermon. It is symbol of propagation as well as the name of doctrine "khetpattih kṣāntir ākāśa" (6).

7. Vermilion (meru) — The Brahma Kandali (meru) offered it to the Buddha and on Buddha’s blessing vermilion became the mark of overpowering knowledge.

8. White mustard (meru) — Vajrapani (meru) offered it to the Buddha and which was blessed as a demon defeating tooth.

In Rinchen Terdol, one finds that the Brahman Kandali (meru), offered the grass (No.4), goddess of tree (meru) offered the fruit (No.5) and mother of earth (meru) offered the vermilion (No.7) to the Jina i.e. the Buddha.

SYMBOLIC

I

The Eight Auspicious Objects symbolize the Noble Eightfold Path (dharma) laid down by the Buddha. The Noble Eightfold Path consists of—

1. Right Thought (sattva)
2. Right Mindfulness (sattva)
3. Right Livelihood (sattva)
4. Right Effort (sattva)
5. Right Action (सत्य कार / अनुष्ठित/अस्त्रीयः)
6. Right Speech (सत्य वचन / अनुष्ठित/प्रकट)
7. Right Meditation (सत्य ध्यान / अनुष्ठित/प्रकट)
8. Right View (सत्य दृष्ट / अनुष्ठित/९६ी)

Right Thought is the correct understanding of the doctrine and the thought which gives rise to exposition of the doctrine (6). The mirror symbolizes the Right Thought as it holds the right reflection without change.

The great philosopher, Santi Deva (सांति देव) explains the Right Mindfulness as meditation on Right Mindfulness which protects one from ignorance and impurity and suffering (7). Giwang represents the Right Mindfulness being a medicine, which cures the ailments and keeps one's mind free.

Cord symbolizes the Right Livelihood as it is a food free from any impurity (sin).

Vasubandhu's (वसुबंधु) commentary on Saralasita / शारालसिता (10) describes the Right Effort as the practice of Dharma for Life Eternal without any difficulty or harm. As we shall see below the symbolic meaning of the grass is longevity.

Right Action is forsaking the sin and adhering to the virtue (11). Fruit symbolizes success in such action.

White conch-shell stands for Right Speech as it produces a melodious sound which can put down other sounds. Right Speech is always free from any faulty statement or evil words.

Veneration represents the Right Meditation. The great reformer Tsongkhapa (त्सोṅ- kho-pa) explains that by Right Meditation one can gain the highest power (11).

White mustard symbolizes the Right View. It subdues the evil spirits as the Right View can defeat the wrong views.
Symbolism of these eight objects can be read from the point of benefit. Thus eight auspicious objects symbolise benefit either to self (अस्मात / श्रवण) or to others (पशुम / गुणकालय). The mirror represents the self and the rest symbolise the others.

Mirror, as one can see one’s own reflection in the mirror, the Buddha knew all the things without having any doubt when He had the vision, that is the Bodhi (Knowledge). In this way mirror symbolises the self benefit.

The Buddha’s kind deeds that is deeds for others’ benefit can be in four ways: quiet (श्रवण), abundant (श्रवण), power (श्रवण) and terrific (श्रवण).

Generally the quiet service can be performed in two kinds, relief from illness and ignorance.

Intestinal concretion stands as relief from illness as itself is a medicine and as we have seen above as the best medicine which was blessed by the Buddha.

Curd symbolises relief from suffering due to ignorance. According to Uttarāṇaṇaṭa the essence of the Bodhi is in the ten stages of perfection of a Bodhisattva ‘‘१० जिस ज्ञानम् अनीलवालोऽयं ज्ञानम्’’(11). In this way curd symbolises the essence of Bodhi; the curd being made from milk which contains the essence of all grases ‘‘स्थलोऽयं ज्ञानम्’’(14).

Abundant service may be in three ways: life (श्रवण), happiness (श्रवण) and doctrine (श्रवण).

Grass represents long life; in Kuncho Tendon’s (कुन्चो तेंदुले) works one finds the name of this grass as Chikah (चिकान).
(14) which means hard to die. Sometimes the name of the grass is तज्ज्वल (tajjval) (16) or the object of long life.

Fruit symbolises the abundant happiness. In लहर्विवाद it reads as "सन्त-सप्तसंतरामथियलः नामत् तिथिसु श्रीमत्" (17), that is, a virtuous person will succeed. The fruit has the name as Seiphal दीपाला (18) and the the word श्री (shree) is good for virtue as well as success; श्री also means Siddha श्री (19).

White conch-shell symbolises the hearing of the doctrine. To understand the doctrine one must hear first and in this way hearing is important as it is said in उनसाहायता "ज्ञानकोश" द्वारा दर्शन विषयनीय "(20). Besides the sound of the conch-shell can drown the other sounds, stands for preaching of sermon which can subdue the sound of non-religion.

The power service is rendered by vermilion. Vermilion represents the power of knowledge. The Sanskrit word सिंदूरस (śindūras) has lost its correct pronunciation and became सिद्धर्स (śiddhaś) or सेद्दरस (śeddaras) is Tibetan (21). It has a name as red sand रक्षाभंजन (rakṣābhamjan) (22) and the red colour itself stands for power when the four services are symbolised by the colours "हरी हरकांडाओ दुर्गन्धे ताड़ुर्गन्धे" (23).

The terrific service is that of the white mustard. The white mustard symbolises force. The other name of mustard Kadamphal, खाद्यपाह (khamphal) (24), means conquest or suppression of evil. The white mustard is also known as Siddha (25). It is significantly the last in the display of the Eight Auspicious Objects. It guarantees the success of the seven previous offerings as well.
At the conclusion of the ceremony the head priest greets as follows:

May mirror purify defilements in your thought.
May concretion end your misery.
May curd quieten the three poisons (i.e. lust, hatred and ignorance)
May grass prolong your life.
May fruit fulfil your desires.
May white conch shell spread your reputation.
May vermilion make your dominion firm.
May white mustard subdue your enemies (16).

NOTES

3. Tenjur, སྤྱིན་ཏེ་; Vol. 5: p. 43.
5. Same as under note No. 4.
7. Rinchen Terzod, Vol. 5; རྡུང་ལྷག་ོང་པ་, བཤེག་པ་ གཞན་གླིང་; p. 12 and also in རྡུང་ལྷག་ོང་པ་, བཤེག་པ་ གཞན་གླིང་; p. 17 in the same volume.
26. Same as under note No. 4.

MINAK R. THURB
Price per copy Rupees Five